BORN IN EDMONTON 100 YEARS AGO

Tribune.
William McMillan, who was born in Edmonton, then a trading post of the Hudson's Bay Company, one hundred and three years ago, died this morning at his home in St. James. Mr. McMillan's father was a chief factor of the Hudson's Bay Company, stationed at the far away post now known as Edmonton. William was born there and grew to manhood. He came to Winnipeg in the early days and settled in St. James, where a family of three generations has grown up around him. The old gentleman had been blind for over twenty years, but his memory was good, and the stories he could tell of early western life at the trading posts would fill books and make interesting reading.

—Justice Scott delivered his judgment yesterday in an important case, the first one of the kind decided by a judge of the Supreme Court in the Territories, i.e. the medical profession vs. Mrs. Sarah Roudau. The latter was convicted on the complaint of the medical profession, in May last by Major Belcher, of unlawfully practicing medicine and surgery. The evidence pointed out that she had acted as midwife in a number of cases, and Major Belcher was of the opinion that this was practicing medicine and surgery, and, as Mrs. Roudau was not a doctor within the meaning of the law, she was found guilty of an offence.

On appeal Judge Scott decided otherwise, and in an elaborate judgment, has given the costs to Mrs. Roudau. Mr. Ewing appeared for the medical profession, and M. Wilfrid Gariepy conducted the case for Mrs. Sarah Roudau.

They're Not Fools

General managers and directors of our Canadian banking institutions are not generally considered fools. They are shrewd, far-seeing men, who are ever on the alert and whose judgment on business affairs is sound. They are always in touch with the extension of trade and commerce, and very frequently see what others who do not give so much attention to these matters do not perceive. The fact that six of our leading Canadian banks are in operation here and that these "Napoleons of finance" have great faith in the future of Edmonton. We won't they know what they are doing. Was the general manager of the bank of Montreal a fool when he sanctioned paying $300 a foot for a suitable lot for a bank building in this city? Not much; he gave evidence of his shrewdness, for that lot will be worth twice that figure inside of five years. Why hesitate about buying city real estate? This outlook was never brighter and the opportunity to make handsome profits is with us. If you fail to seize the opportunity don't whine when some other fellow carries off the prize. The Great West Land company has a splendid list of business and residential property in all parts of the city. A few lots in the east end at from $75 to $200.

FROM OTTAWA

Bulletin Correspondence.

At last the end of the session is in sight, or it not actually in sight, there are signs of its approach. Yesterday the discussion of the transcontinental railway bill in committee was finished and the bill now stands for third reading. The final touches were also put to the redistribution bill in the committee stage, and it also stands for the third reading. These are the two most contentious measures of the session, and the ones which were expected to, and as a matter of fact have, occupied more time than any others. With them out of the way there is every reason to expect an early prorogation. In the case of the redistribution, an agreement was reached between the two sides of the House as to the three constituencies of Waterloo and East and West Hastings, which closed the work on the bill.

A number of amendments were moved to the transcontinental railway bill, and were disposed of without being discussed at any very great length. Mr. McLean moved to require the Grand Trunk railway to give a two-cent rate for third-class passengers. Mr. Northrup moved that the work on the eastern and western divisions of the railway should not be commenced until specific plans, tenders and contracts had been submitted. Mr. Northrup also moved that in case of suspension of the work of construction of the government section of the railway, the Grand Trunk Pacific should have no claim for damages against the government. Mr. Barker moved to amend the Grand Trunk company from holding preferred stock, bonds, or debentures of the Grand Trunk Pacific company without consent of the Governor and Council. Mr. Barker also moved for a proportioning of accounts between the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Grand Trunk in the matter of the interchange of traffic. Mr. Barker also moved for an inspection of the accounts of the Grand Trunk company on the same principle as the bill provides for inspection of accounts of the Grand Trunk Pacific. Dr. Roach moved that the rates on the western division of the Grand Trunk should not exceed the lowest rates on the Canadian Northern. These amendments were declared lost.

The minister of justice moved an amendment to make more rigid the clause preventing members of the Senate or House of Commons from becoming shareholders in any construction company, or taking an interest directly or indirectly in any contract connected with the Grand Trunk Pacific railway. The minister of justice also moved to empower the construction of a telegraph system along the western or government division of the railway, the cost to be added to the capital cost of the railway upon which interest is to be paid by the Grand Trunk Pacific, and also to authorize the company to do a local telegraph business. These amendments were carried.

A resolution by the minister of finance to place a sum of $250,000 to the credit of the Northwest government for expenditure on permanent public works on capital account gave rise to considerable discussion; into which the subject of provincial autonomy for the Territories was introduced by members of the opposition. In explaining the purpose of the resolution the minister took occasion to mention the amount received by the Territories for ordinary expenditure each year. In 1893 the amount was $199,000; in 1894, $199,000; in 1895, $225,000; in 1896, $267,000; in 1897, $242,000; in 1898, $262,000; in 1899, $252,000; in 1900, $282,000; in 1901, $242,000; in 1902, $267,000; in 1903, $267,000; and for 1904, the subsidy would be $250,000 besides the $250,000 set apart for the resolution for expenditure on capital account, and also be $84,000 for rebuilding the Old Man River bridge at Macleod, and the Belly River bridge at Lethbridge. The subsidy mentioned as given from year to year in the nature of a provincial subsidy, and were, therefore, for current expenditure from year to year had been increased from year to year to meet the growing needs of the Territories caused by increase of population, as stated by the Territorial government. It was felt that besides the yearly subsidies arising in the Territories, there from time to time arose a need of large permanent expenditure, chiefly for the construction of important bridges. The cost of these could not fairly be taken out of the annual appropriation for current expenditure, which was based on ordinary and current needs. In order that these important requirements should be met, in due course, it had been decided to advance to the Territorial government from time to time lump sums, which would put that government in a position to undertake important and costly public works. The Territorial government, not having a fixed revenue, was not in a position to borrow money to meet such requirements, but in view of the ultimate organization of the Territories as a province, and of the fact that such a province, when organized would be entitled to an allowance on debt account in proportion to its population, it was thought well for the Dominion government to make this advance with a view to its ultimate being charged up to the debt account of the province when finally organized. It was impossible as yet to say what the terms of provincial organization would be and, therefore, he was not in a position to say what would be the final adjustment in regard to this advance, except that it would be without interest. But provincial organization would have to be given at some time, and probably at no distant date, and by making this advance now the Territorial government was put in a position to meet the requirements of the Territories without prejudice to future arrangements between the proposed province and the Dominion.

Messrs. Gillmour, Boyd, Roach, Henderson, Spruille and Clancy on the Conservative side endorsed the increase of grant to the Territories, but some of them objected to the advance on capital account, claiming that it would lead to difficulty in the readjustment when it took place. Messrs. Boyd, Henderson, Roach and Spruille discussed the subject of provincial autonomy, and stated that the Territories were clamoring for it. Sir Wilfred pointed out that the Territories now had all the legislative powers of a province and indeed all the powers except to borrow money. Had the Territories been organized into a province it could only have been seven members on the basis of the last census, instead of ten which it was receiving. Under the decision of the Supreme Court it would be impossible for school districts to collect taxes on C. P. R. land after provincial organization was effected.

Mr. Oliver said that the autonomy which the Territorial government asked for and the autonomy which the opposition members were willing to grant might be two different things. He said that the Northwest government was conditioned upon an adjustment of the per capita grant on the basis of a census taken every five years; and at the same time, he said, the Territories would leave a provincial government as far short of the financial requirements of the country in a few years hence as the Territorial government has been for several years past. If provincial autonomy were conceded on the terms asked by the Northwest government it would be quite acceptable, but if only conceded on the terms accorded other provinces he did not believe that it would be acceptable to the people of the Territories. He was sure that the Northwest government would be both pleased and surprised at the generosity of view expressed by the members of the opposition in regard to the amount of the grant. If the quarter of a million advance on capital account could be added to current revenue, he would join them in voting for it; and indeed saw no reason why the amount should not be made half a million instead of a quarter. At the same time, as the amount to be voted this year was a very substantial increase over that of the preceding years, he did not feel that it would be advisable for Northwest members to leave themselves open in this instance to the criticism which has so often been levelled against them in the past, of making unreasonable demands. He thought it better to be satisfied with a fair increase than to give it to be understood that whatever increase was made would still be unsatisfactory.

A bill to increase the salaries of civil servants was introduced by the postmaster general and carried partly through committee.

It may not be generally known that we are in the Belting Business but we are very much in it. We don't touch the cheap kind, but we sell the best grade of Leather Belting produced (Extra Brand), Single and double, all sizes. Once used, always used.

We have just unpacked our winter stock of Horse Blankets and Robes, and our showing easily surpasses anything ever offered in the City before. Thirty different kinds of Blankets, from the plain Jutes to the elaborate Stay-on's, and if we cannot suit you we have the satisfaction of knowing that nobody else can. We invite you to examine our stock.

Just a word about Trunks and Valises. We pay particular attention to these goods, and can say as a matter of fact without boasting that our stock is not only the largest but the best assorted in the city. Don't take our word, but come and look around. We have a carload arriving in a few days which will make our stock equal to anything west of Toronto, and that is saying a good deal. Trunks from $1.25 to $40. Valises from 75c to $15, and Suit Cases as high as $35. See our special Ladies' Dress Trunks, nobody else has them. These are all bought direct from the factory and the prices are right.

Don't overlook us when you need a good set of Harness. We take pride in turning out good work.
